Texas Music Project presents My First Ukulele at DDAMF, putting instruments directly into the hands of the next generation of musicians. A select group of students will receive a FREE introductory ukulele lesson, paint and personalize their own instrument, learn their first chords and songs, and take home beginner lesson materials, plus their very own ukulele to continue their music journey.

These ukuleles have traveled an incredible path: donated by Can'd Aid, assembled by community volunteers, and prepared with the help of Greenhill School's Music for a Cause.

SOONER

In such an interesting world I attempt to wonder around leaving a piece of me behind while attempting to go unnoticed. Using spray paint in combination with shapes and colors I try to leave an impact on viewers who least expected it. Im always working on attracting the eye of all viewers by fusing organic and technical urban styles. Something the public is familiar with but with a modern twist that speak to some and ignored by others. In doing so Ive left a huge body of work of 30+ years in my path for the public to do as they choose with it!

J.MVRPH

BIO

Started in 2016 as an open format DJ in New Orleans on Bourbon Street and Frenchmen Street. Five years of nightly crowd reading, genre blending, and 2-4 deck pressure. Moved to Dallas in 2021 to rebuild inside the EDM scene. Now locked on house, dubstep, bass, and everything heavy with groove, but can still keep the vibes for family-friendly events.
